Chapter 1 - INTRODUCTION

It started as a hobby, and now it has become my passion.

#domains #outbound

I sold my first domain for $600 at the end of March 2020.

I know, I know it's not much. But, it gave me the belief that if I can sell one domain, I can sell more.

I've now sold around 70 domains and made over $25,000 from the end of March to October 2020.

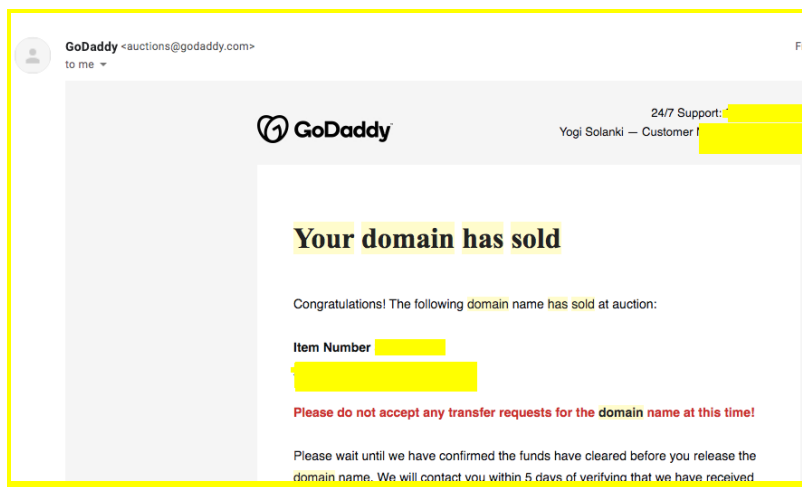

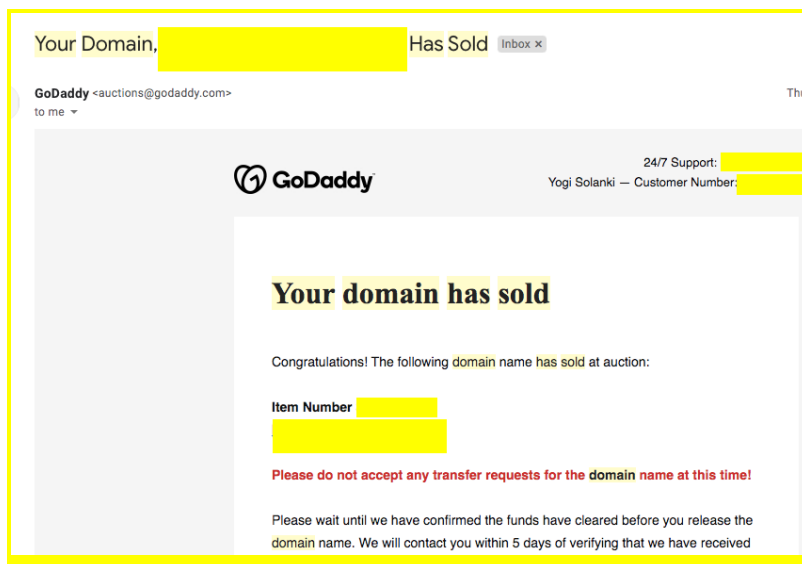

I'll show you exactly how I did it and what it takes to sell domains via outbound.

Most of my sales happen in the $299-$1,000 range, but does selling domains for $500, $300, or even $100 “add up?”

These smaller amounts do add up! Below is the screenshot of my Dan.com account with my total revenue from June - October 2020.

I've sold over $10,000 worth of domains on GoDaddy, too.

In total, I have sold around 70 domains from March to October 2020 on both GoDaddy and Dan.com, with an average price per sale of $400.

My name is Yogi Solanki, and I'm from New Delhi, India. I have a background in sales and marketing, and I joined this fantastic domain industry in 2020.

I dedicate this ebook to my parents, they are not with me anymore, but I'm sure they are looking after me from heaven. Whatever I'm today because of my parents.

I miss you both every day. RIP

Chapter 2 - Why I Wrote This Ebook

I remember in March 2020, I was searching online for “how to make money selling domains,” yet here I am at the end of 2020, writing an ebook on how to sell domains.

Considering I'm new to this industry, I've been getting many emails and DMs on Twitter about how I sell domains so fast.

What kind of domains do I buy? What are my email templates?

Can you please help me check what's wrong with the sales letter

Oct 18, 2020, 3:08 AM

Hello,

As you offer Roofing service, the premium domain name,  is available. This is a memorable domain name that is relevant to your business and location.

Your company will definitely take a boost if you redirect this keyword-optimized name to your current website or build a new one on the domain name to capture additional targeted customers and increase sales.

I have a domain I'm currently outbouding and in the follow up i got to see her viewed it 46 times. I'm kinda confused
Could it be he wants to buy
Pls can you recommend any follow up letter so i can use to convince him

Replying to @ysolanky

I think you should monetize it by writing an ebook for this niche. And you can make a good amount of selling this knowledge. Hopefully, the target customers would be the fresh domainers. And later provide lead/broker services for top guns.

9:11 PM · Oct 24, 2020 · Twitter Web App

Whether you are new to this industry or an experienced domain investor, I understand selling domains is not easy, especially via outbound.

I believe in Karma, and I'm all for sharing knowledge. I was doing my bit to share my process on Twitter, but that was not enough, I guess.

If anyone has success by reading this book, my purpose in writing this will be fulfilled.

That is the reason I decided to write this. In my ebook, I'll talk about how you can buy domains for $10-$200 or more and flip them fast every week to make money.

Now, I'm going to share the exact process I use to sell domains every week.

Ready?

Ready to make money flipping domains?

Let's do this.

CHAPTER 3 – Workflow/Motivation

A workflow is clearly defined as a sequential process of the optimal way to get things done.

If you have never undertaken the process of creating a workflow from start to finish, it may feel like a complicated process, but you can make it easier by dividing it into parts.

I'm a full-time domain investor, and I spend around 8-10 hours every day buying and selling domains.

I have divided my workflow into two parts: Buying and Selling.

- Buying: I'm not a heavy buyer. My domain portfolio is tiny, and I only have around 30-40 domains listed on different domain marketplaces.

Saturdays and Sundays are the only days when I spend most of my time buying domains.

Selling: As I mentioned earlier, I'm a full-time domain investor. I spend 80-90% of my time selling domains, and I work 8-10 hours a day.

As a full-time domain investor, cash flow matters a lot. To achieve this, one has to hustle every day. My focus is more on selling, with Monday to Friday dedicated mainly to selling domains.

The best thing that I like about this domain industry is you only need a laptop and an internet connection. You can do this from the comfort of your home.

It sounds easy but working from home requires some discipline. It starts by setting up some ground rules.

- Set A Regular Schedule - You have to start your work at the same time each day.
- Take Regular Breaks - Take regular breaks throughout the whole day. Long stretches can create boredom.
- Keep a Dedicated Office Space - Dedicate a desk and some peripherals only for work use, and please keep your desk clean.
- Reward yourself - If you have hit a significant sale or have achieved your weekly/monthly target, you can reward yourself by either taking a day off or buying yourself a gift.

Above all else, figure out what works best for you. This approach has worked out well for me over the last 6-7 months.

Maybe it's right for you too. Give it a shot, and you'll know!

Motivation: If you want to be successful in doing outbound, the most important thing you need is motivation. I know my motivation and reason for doing outbound full time, which keeps me going every day.

Here are some ways to get motivated:

- Monitor your goals and progress.
- Keep setting new goals.
- Surround yourself with motivated people.
- Take motivation from others.

Find your motivation, and money will find you.

CHAPTER 4 – What is Inbound/Outbound

What is Inbound?

When a buyer comes to you with an offer to buy your domain, it is inbound.

To receive inbound offers, you should list your domains on different marketplaces such as Afternic, Uniregistry, Dan, Sedo, Epik, etc.

With inbound, the buyer is coming to you rather than you approaching the buyer, giving you an edge over the buyer during negotiations.

If you only want to sell all of your domains for the highest possible price, stick with inbound only.

If your domain portfolio's quality is high enough, you can receive some inbound offers every month and get some big sales.

I have not sold a domain through inbound, so I can't talk about this much because this is not my area of expertise.

What is Outbound?

Outbound marketing refers to where a company/person reaches out to people/companies to see if they're interested in your product or service.

Outbound means you approach the buyers to purchase your domain, which can be done through emails, phone calls, and other marketing modes.

In my opinion, while doing outbound, you are a few steps behind in negotiations because you are approaching the buyer first rather than them knocking on your door.

Selling domains through outbound might provide you with a better cash flow, but it likely means selling at lower prices, depending on the name's quality.

Whether you are doing outbound part-time or full time, One needs to have lots of patience and a proper schedule to succeed in outbound.

Outbound is time-consuming and requires a proper strategy.

CHAPTER 5 – Start With Your Niche

In my opinion, the key to success in the domain industry is finding and choosing a niche. By doing that, you can avoid one of the most common mistakes domain investors make, especially beginners, which is going too broad.

Let me give you my example:

Before I started selling domains, I generated online leads/calls for insurance agencies based in the USA.

I was generating leads in:

- Final expense
- Medicare
- Health insurance

I was doing well, but because of COVID-19, my business slowed, leading me to join the domain industry.

Insurance is a vast niche but, if you break “insurance” down, you’d soon find plenty of micro-niches under the insurance sector, as I mentioned above.

So, what I did was I bought a few insurance-related domains by breaking them down to micro niches in which I had the experience and knowledge. Most importantly, I knew who my buyers were.

This whole process made it easier to sell those domains.

These are some of the insurance domains that I sold:

TXedicarePlans.com	$300
MedicareAdvantagePlans.net	$350
RichmondMedicare.com	$300

They all got sold in a matter of days. Do you know why? Because this is my niche, and I'm still selling insurance domains every week.

If you are a beginner, I would highly recommend you start with your niche in which you have experience or have some knowledge.

If you are in tech, finance, or marketing industries, use that experience to your advantage and narrow them down by finding your micro-niche.

Ensure the domains you are buying do bring some commercial value to buyers; otherwise, they won't sell.

Commercial Value:

- Domains should have a minimum of 100/200 Google search volume every month.
- CPC (cost per click) should be a minimum of $1-$2.
- Paid ads: check on Google to see if companies are running paid ads on that particular keyword (domain).
- .com only.

Use Dotdb.com to check how many businesses are using a “similar” name to your domain name and how many extensions are taken and developed.

Let me share one of my sales as an example:

The domain RichmondMedicare.com which I sold, was not an upgrade for the buyer, and they were pleased with the domain they were using.

When I contacted them, the buyer bought this name because they saw the value and wanted to have a local reach and less competition.

You'll be far more successful if you drill down to a micro-niche within a broader market. Find your niche and kick start your journey.

Chapter 6 - Finding little nuggets (domains)

There are different strategies to find the right domain name.

Here are some of the tools and domain marketplaces to find domains, which I'm sure you already know.

- ExpiredDomains.net (a personal favorite)
- GoDaddy Closeout
- GoDaddy expired auctions
- DropCatch
- Snapnames, and many more.

My favorite is ExpiredDomains.net. I spend more time there than on any other platform.

I don't use GoDaddy Closeout or GoDaddy expired auctions that much. I'm not saying they are not worth it, but this is my experience, and I can only share what has worked for me.

You can also buy some quality domains at DropCatch.com by participating in auctions.

As I mentioned earlier, start with your niche first to get some quick sales, and once you get the confidence, you can start exploring other niches.

I started with insurance, but now I'm into some other profitable niches too.

Here are some other niches which I find profitable for quick flips:

Lawn/Pest Control

Tree Removal

Limo/Limousine

Home Improvement

Travel

Insurance

Plumbing

Lawyer/Law

Accountant

Architects

Culture: Art and Music

Wellness: Spa and Salon

Finance

Locksmith

Fitness

Solar

Interior/exterior designing

Photography

Cabin Rental

Some of my favorite keywords:

Capital

Group

Service

Care

Online

Construction

Let's do a quick walkthrough on how to find some quality .com domains from ExpiredDomains.net.

Step 1 - Login to ExpiredDomains.net.

Step 2 - Click on Pending Delete.

Step 3 - Click on show filter.

Step 4 - Under the common tab, look for domain name settings and select only characters.

Step 5 - Click on the additional tab and under original gTLDs, select .com

Step 6 - Under name in “selected TLD is registered,” choose .net.

Step 7 - Now, click apply filter. Now, you will be able to see all pending delete domains.

Step 8 - Click on WBY (The birth year of a domain using whois).

You can choose many other filters. For example, in step 6, you can add more than one TLD to find domains taken in more than one extension.

Also, in the common tab filter under the “dictionary word domains,” you can choose “English” to get English dictionary word names.

Now, you can see all the pending delete domains list showing you domains which are getting expired. Go through the list and find some good domains.

Using these filters, you can also find domains in specific niches that are expiring, for example, “travel”.

Click on show filter, click on the common tab, and under the domain name allow list, type travel in the contains field, and click apply filter.

Now, you’ll be able to find some travel industry domains that are expiring.

Similarly, you can search for GEO (city, state, or country) domains.

“Make sure you check the domain’s history using <https://archive.org/web/> to make sure that the domain was not used as spam and has a good clean history.”

The ExpiredDomains.net platform has many excellent filters, and the more time you spend on it, the better you get.

Another way to find good quality expired domains is by going through the “deleted .com” list on ExpiredDomains.net.

Click on “deleted .com.”

Use the same filters that I mentioned above on how to find “pending delete” domains, except one change:

Click on the common tab, and in the bottom right corner, you will find “only available domains.” check that option to make sure you only see those domains available for registration.

By using this method, you can find some good .com names that are available for registration.

You can play with the different filters and find good .com names. The more you practice, the better you get.

Finding domains through Google Keyword Planner

I've found many good names using Google Keyword Planner.

If you've some knowledge/experience about how search volume and CPC (cost per click) works, that can be an added advantage for you to find suitable names.

Let's discuss this step by step:

If you already have a Google Ads account, you can log in. Otherwise, you can create one. It's free.

Step 1 - Login to your Google Ads account

Step 2 - Click on tools, and under the first option "planning," click on Keyword Planner.

Step 3 - Click on discover new keyword, now type the particular niche for which you are searching for a domain, for example, fitness.

Step 4 - Select the country of your choice to check the search volume.

Step 5 - Click on "get results."

You can now see all results, such as monthly search volume, CPC, competition, and more.

Step 6 - Focus on monthly search volume, competition, and CPC (how much companies are paying per click to run ads on Google for that particular keyword)

Have any domain registrar's website open to check if any particular keyword you like is available for registration or not.

Step 7 - You can download or copy and paste all the keywords in a separate spreadsheet and do a bulk domain search on GoDaddy or any other registrar.

Step 8 - Go through some good search volume keywords related to “fitness” and check if they are available for registration or not.

Avoid registering domains with more than three words or containing made-up names.

You can use this Google keyword tool to find GEO and any other industry-related domains. The best thing about this tool is it will broaden your search and provide you with more options.

Always avoid registering trademark names; don't be a cyber squatter.

Other platforms from where you can find good domains:

- GoDaddy Closeout expired auctions
- DropCatch.com pre-release, auctions
- NameJet.com
- SnapNames.com
- NameLiquidate.com

I've bought and sold a few domains from NameLiquidate.com.

Participate in auctions and buy some good domains, it takes money to make money. If someone is bidding on the domain it means the domain has a demand.

Buy only those domains for which you can find at least 50-100 relevant businesses. This will help you broaden your outreach.

AND.. don't buy them yet unless you go through the next chapter

Chapter 7 – The Rule of Six

After having sold more than 65 domains in just 5 to 6 months and made over $25,000, I've created my own rules (quality check) before buying any domain.

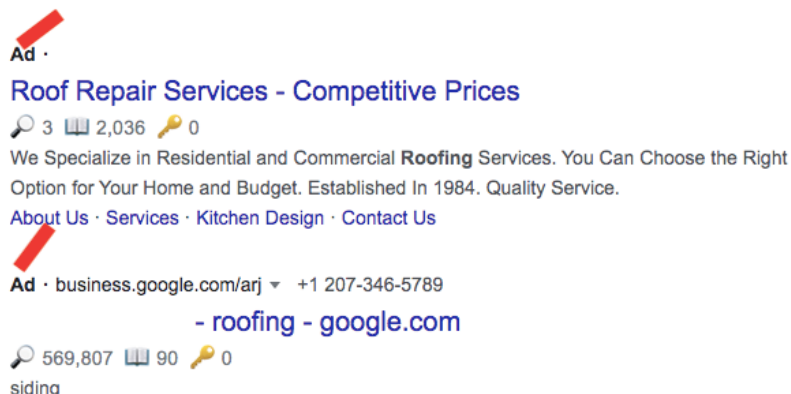

Here are the six essential rules I follow before buying a domain name:

Rule 1 - Check paid ads:

Type the domain name on the Google search bar and check if companies are running paid ads on that particular name

If you see some paid ads, that is a good sign.

Paid ads example: Search term Boston roofer

Rule 2 - Search Volume, minimum 100/200month, CPC

Search volume is the average number of times a specific search query is entered on a search engine per month.

The more search volume you see, the better it is.

There are different tools you can use to find the search volume like Semrush, Ubersuggest, or you can also use Google Ads account.

- Login into Google Ads account.
- Click on tools and settings.
- Under the planning tab, click on “Keyword Planner.”
- Click on discover new keywords.
- Enter the domain name.
- Select the country.
- Hit get results.

Example: Keyword - pet insurance California

Use different keywords for more results Edit

Broaden your search:
+ pet insurance
+ insurance california
+ insurance
+ health insurance
+ pet insurance colorado

Exclude adult ideas
ADD FILTER
13 keyword ideas available

☐ Keyword (by relevance) ↓	Avg. monthly searches	Competition	Ad impression share	Top of page bid (low range)	Top of page bid (high range)	Account Status
Keywords that you provided
☐ pet insurance california	100 – 1K	High	–	US$4.81	US$13.38
Keyword ideas
☐ best pet insurance calif...	100 – 1K	High	–	US$4.14	US$9.93
☐ dog insurance california	100 – 1K	High	–	US$4.36	US$14.78

Or the easier way to do is download a Chrome extension “Keyword Surfer,” and you can use that to see monthly search volume and CPC(cost per click)

Rule 3 - Dotdb.com

Open dotdb.com and enter the domain name.

Using Dotdb, you can check how many extensions the domain is taken in and how many businesses are already using a similar name in their URL.

The more results you get, the better it is.

Rule 4 - LinkedIn Search

Login into your LinkedIn account. On the search bar, enter the domain name and hit enter.

Click on more and select companies.

If you can see “similar” companies related to your domain name, it is a good sign.

Rule 5 - Relevant search result

Enter the domain name on the Google search bar, and look for relevant search results on the first 10-20 pages related to your domain name.

You can either do an exact match search using the quotation mark “domain name” or a broad search without the quotes.

Check for relevant companies that might have the keyword in their brand.

Rule 6 - Past sales data

Check past domain sales to see if any similar domain names have ever been valuable and sold.

Use NameBio.com and check how many similar domains have been sold in the past.

You can also use GoDaddy Appraisal to check comparable sales.

If the domain I’m planning to buy falls under these 6 points, I’ll go ahead and buy that domain either from the drop or by doing a backorder.

Succeeding in outbound takes a lot of digging and a strong work ethic, but if you can do all six of these things before buying a domain, you will be able to prevail.

You can also create your quality parameters before buying a domain.

For the backorder, you can use DropCatch.com, SnapNames.com, or NameJet.com.

DropCatch provides a discount club option by which you can backorder a domain name for $10. The standard backorder fee on DropCatch is $59

Make sure you read the difference between discount club and standard backorder on DropCatch.com before placing the backorder.

I would highly recommend doing a backorder, especially if the name is of good quality.

Note: Always buy those domains that can help you find at least 100-200 businesses to do outreach.

Know your buyer - Don't buy a domain because you liked it, Buy one that your buyer likes. Think like a buyer.

Chapter 8 - How many domains should you buy?

It depends on your budget but If you are new, start small.

Let me give you my example:

From the end of March to October 2020, I've bought around 120 domains so far, and I've sold about 70 domains.

Let's do the math:

- My average sale price per domain is $400
- Total domains sold $70 * $400$ (avg price) = $28,000
- My acquisition per domain is around $30.
- Total domains bought $120 * $30 = \3600
- Total sales $28,000 - $3600 (initial investment) = $24,400
- Gross $24,400
- Dan.com total sales is $13,595 - 5% = $12,915
(5% is if you manually initiate the lead otherwise Dan.com standard fee is 9%)
- GoDaddy total sales $10,805 - 20% = $8,644
- $$12,915 + $8,644 = $21,559$ net profit

I buy around 7-10 domains every 10-15 days, and I won't buy any more domains until I sell at least 50% or more.

Any domains I cannot sell, I list on different marketplaces to get some inbound offers.

You can also try to resell unsold domains again after 3-4 months. I've sold a few domains like this.

Something is better than nothing:

If your domain still doesn't sell and renewal is due, you can use NameLiquiDate.com. Your domain may sell to someone willing to pay between $998 and $9 per domain.

If you are new, you can try this:

- Buy ten good domains
- $10 * $12 = \120 (initial investment)
- Don't buy any more domains until you sell at least 50% of them
- Give yourself a target of 30-60 days
- If you can sell five at an average price of $200, that equals $1000
- $$1000 - 5\%$ (Dan.com fee) - $$120$ initial investment = $830 net profit

Use that $830 to buy more quality names by backorder or in auctions, so you don't have to work that much harder in selling them and keep on repeating the process.

Sometimes you win, sometimes you don't. There will be a time like this where you might end up selling more than 50% of your inventory or even less.

Learn from your mistakes and avoid repeating them. It takes time to build a successful strategy.

Ensure the domains you will buy fall under "The Rule of 6" or do your quality check.

Chapter 9 - How to Find Potential Buyers

Finding a prospect or buyer for your domain is as important as finding the right name. This is the most time-consuming part of outbound and requires a lot of digging.

Here are some of the best tools you can use to find a potential buyer for your domain:

- Google
- LinkedIn
- Facebook
- Dotdb.com

Google: Google is the best tool, and it is free. On Google, you can search for almost anything.

How to find prospects on Google:

- For an exact match search, type “domainname” on Google. For example, if your domain name is RichmondMedicare.com, search “Richmond Medicare.”
- For a broad search, type your domain name “Richmond Medicare” and go up to the first 10-20 pages.

- Type inurl:domainname, to find the phrase in URLs of websites, not just domains. For example, inurl:richmondmedicare.
- Type allintitle:"domainname" to search the title tags of pages. For example, allintitle:richmondmedicare.
- Type your domain name into Google/Bing search engine and look for pay per click ads which are “similar” to the domain name you are selling.

Use all these search terms and build your targeted list

LinkedIn is a great tool to find a potential buyer.

- Type your domain name into the search bar and look for companies that are a “similar” domain to yours.
- For exact match search, use “domainname.”
- For example, if your domain name is HealthInsurance.com, search “Health Insurance.”
- Look for companies that are relevant and might have the keyword in their brand.
- You can also add a prospect by sending a request and making sure you click on “add a note” and type your message regarding that domain name you are selling.
- If you are on a paid plan, LinkedIn does provide you some InMail credits. You can use the credits to reach your prospect directly.

- Join a LinkedIn group relevant to your domain name, but don't just start selling your name. First, join an active conversation, provide some valuable content, and build a conversation.

Facebook

Almost every business has a business page. On Facebook, you can send direct messages and reach your prospects instantly.

- Locate the search window at the top of your Facebook page. Enter your domain name. For example, entering "Miami roofer" would produce search results for Miami roofer in the Miami area.

Click on see all to get the maximum search results

- Click the "Pages" filter link to view only the official business pages from the area specified in your initial search. Clicking the "People" filter will include personal Facebook pages mentioning the type of business in your search. These personal pages may include useful links to official business websites.
- Once you find relevant prospects you can send them DM, or click the "About" tab and peruse the information that is visible. Many businesses include their email address in the public profile, so you may find it right away.

Dotdb.com: Dotdb can help you find “similar” or inferior domains related to your name.

You can use the paid version of Dotdb.com to filter only those active websites (saves a lot of time).

Here are a few more tools to find prospects

- Bing search engine (Google alternative)
- Instagram
- Twitter
- Domainiq.com
- Estibot.com

You can also just type .net .co. io. me. .us on your address bar and check if the website is developed or not.

Make sure you only find those prospects relevant to the domain name you are selling, your email list should be targeted, or else your emails will end up in a spam folder.

Irrelevant: Selling BostonRoofer.com to someone who owns BostonDentist.com is irrelevant and a waste of time.

If you own BostonRoofer.net or .info, don't approach the owner of BostonRoofer.com (they don't care).

Relevant: Selling BostonRoofer.com to someone who owns BostonRoofer.net and approaching roofing companies in Boston.

Check Crunchbase for relevant companies that might have the keyword in their brand.

Who To Contact

Emailing the right person within an organization is important. Once you have a list of potential companies, identify the key person you can target

That can be:

- CEO, President
- CMO (Chief marketing officer)
- Digital marketing head
- CFO (chief financial officer)

It is very important to have your list super targeted, it's all about quality over quantity.

So, I'm hoping you have found potential prospects. Now, it's time to find emails.

Chapter 10 - Tools To Find Emails

Nowadays, you can find almost anyone's email thanks to all the tools we have, and you can find them very quickly.

Below are some tools you can use to find emails

- Snov.io
- Apollo.io
- Hunter.io
- FindThatLead.com
- ContactOut.com, and many more

If you cannot find any emails or your emails get bounced, fill out the contact us form. I've sold many domains by filling out the contact us form.

You can also use Facebook or Instagram to contact them directly by sending a message. On Facebook, you might find a business page's email by clicking on the about us page.

You can use many tools to extract emails; one of my favorites is snov.io (paid plan $69).

In the next chapter, let's learn the importance of getting your first outbound sale, especially if you are a beginner.

Chapter 11 - Importance Of Your First Outbound Sale

Getting to that first sale requires a solid dose of hustle and creativity; your first sale always sticks with you for a long time.

Most people end up giving up on outbound after trying for a couple of days. It is not easy, but to receive constant success, one has to commit.

Let's discuss a quick way to get your first sale to get your outbound journey rolling.

- Step 1- Find a suitable domain in your niche which you are passionate about.
- Step 2- Should be .com.
- Step 3- Avoid brandable and made-up names.
- Step 4- Follow “The rule of 6”.
- Step 5- Reach out to your existing connections in your niche.
- Step 6- Be reasonable with the price and flip.

Don't focus on a significant ROI while getting your first sale. Focus more on getting your first sale. It is a psychological barrier that you have to break.

I always outbound at least two domains a day, which helps me keep my sales pipeline filled with prospects. I send around 100 laser-targeted emails for every domain.

If you've spent $12-$50 on a domain, try to sell that name for a small return. You are not losing any money; you'll still get your profit.

Once you get the first sale, trust me, that will give you so much confidence to kick start your outbound journey.

Selling domains for $200-$1000 has been working for me, but this does not mean that I do not ask for a higher price.

I have some domains that have more value, and I have turned down a few low ball offers for $500-$1500 because the value of these domains is high.

If you have valuable domains, don't sell them cheap. If you cannot sell them via outbound, it would be good to list them on the domain aftermarket with your asking price and wait for buyers to come to you.

Chapter 12 - What is Cold Email?

A cold email is an attempt to sell your product/service to a potential buyer without having any existing connection.

For example:

If you send someone an email with whom you have never met or spoken to, it is a cold email.

Is cold email SPAM?

That is a debatable question, but in my opinion, spam and cold email are different.

Here's why.

SPAM:

- Using a fake name (alias)
- No personalization
- No company name/ no contact information
- Sending the same email to several people

SPAM Example:

“Hi, Would you like to buy this domain name?”

This is short and catchy, and I'm looking to sell this for $$$$$

We provide some of the best domains names you can find

The search volume for this name is blah blah...

Let me know if you like to buy it?

Regards

Domain Investor”

Can you see all the signs of spam?

The email above doesn't address the receipt by name, no request to build a conversation.

“Let me know if you like to buy” - super generic.

Also,

No contact information, No company details, No name

Now let's compare that with this cold email:

“Hi (Name), We own this domain name, and we are seeking out some potential buyers for this name.

After doing some search, we found out that your (name of the business) might be a potential suitor for this domain.

I would love to know if it suits you and let me know if you would like to receive more information?

Warm Regards,

Yogi Solanki

Company Name, Phone Number, Website”

Can you see the difference?

This email is personalized, not pushy, and there's no direct selling.

Also...

I have mentioned my name, phone number, business name, and website.

And... I just shared one of my email templates, for which I've received so many messages and emails.

Always bring value to your prospects and offering someone value is not spam in my opinion

Sharing a few examples:

- Selling .com to a .net user
- Selling two- word .com to a company who is using three-word .com

Avoid doing this

Selling .net, .org, hyphen names to .com user

Does this all make sense now?

Important: Please follow local/international spam laws, and you must read the basic understanding of the rules around email marketing to ensure you aren't breaking any.

Must Read - CAN-Spam Act

Tell recipients how to opt-out of receiving future emails from you. Honor opt-out requests promptly

Chapter 13 - Free Email or Custom Domain Email?

Should I get a professional email address for my email marketing campaigns, or should I kick off with a free Gmail, Yahoo? That's a dilemma that many of us face.

If you are new, you can start with a free email account, but I would highly recommend getting a custom domain email. To help you decide, I summed up the pros and cons of both free and custom domain email addresses.

What is the difference between a free email account and a custom email address?

Free email accounts end with an email provider's name, for example, @gmail.com, @hotmail.com, or @yahoo.com.

Suppose you're the CEO of a mid-sized company; which email would you rather open and reply to: from name@yahoo.com or name@businessname? Which one looks more legit and trustworthy?

Free email accounts ending in @gmail.com, @yahoo.com, @outlook.com, etc., make you look unprofessional and provisional. They don't inspire trust.

Suppose you are using a free email address. You can try and send emails manually but make sure your email list is super targeted and personalized.

If you choose to send mass emails through Outlook, Gmail, or Yahoo, there is a high chance that your IP reputation will be affected. In terms of SPAM, not using an appropriate application to send mass emails would be giving you a direct ticket to the SPAM folder.

Tip: If you are using free email, try Outlook; it outperforms Gmail in terms of deliverability.

A custom domain email, in contrast, ends with your business domain name, for example, @yourbusinessname.com.

In outbound sales, gaining trust and building credibility in your prospect's eyes is a top priority. Prospects don't know you personally, and they won't engage with you professionally unless they verify that you are a real company.

Selling domains is a B2B process. Your email address is the first thing that can either strengthen or weaken your credibility. In this case, business domain emails have an advantage over the free ones.

If you are not comfortable using your main business domain for outbound campaigns, you can have a separate domain dedicated solely to this purpose.

You can build a website instantly by using GoDaddy or redirect your outbound domain name to your primary domain if you don't want to create a new website.

When it comes to building a consistent brand image, setting up a business domain email becomes a better choice.

Please never use info@businessname, support@businessname for outreach; always use a real name.

What is the email address warm-up?

Email deliverability is critical when you are doing outbound.

Your free email account and a business domain email both need to be well warmed-up before you launch your first outbound campaign.

Why Email Warm-up? - It is vital to building a good email reputation and having a high delivery rate. Email warm-up also increases your sending limits.

Start this process by sending 10-20 manual emails to your friends/family and build a conversation.

During this process, make sure you send emails to various email service providers such as Gmail, Yahoo, GoDaddy, and Outlook.

Don't just send emails. It is crucial to build a conversation thread, ask your friends/family to reply.

It takes 7-10 weeks to achieve maximum deliverability.

Tip: Find an industry that will reply to your emails by nature. E.g., ask for prices and quotes from agents from the service industry.

The time gap between 2 Consecutive emails:

Maintain a time gap of 90-120 seconds between emails; this helps the server realize that you are not a robot.

Avoid Spammy Content: Free, Get, Grab

- Write like a real human
- Limit your hyperlinks
- Limit using images, Gif,

There are many software tools you can use to send cold emails:

Snov.io

Mailshake.com

Mixmax.com

Chapter 14 - How to Send Emails

Selling a domain is tough, and selling it through cold email can make it harder, but it'll make your life easier if you follow these steps.

The first rule of cold email:

Personalize them and send them to the right person.

If your email is well-formed, most CEOs will read it even if it is from an unknown sender.

This means, if you send a personalized cold email to the right person, chances are they are going to read it.

First, let's discuss some of the most common questions we all have related to cold emails:

- What to write in the subject line.
- How to personalized email.
- Best day/time to send an email.
- How many follow up and many more.

Let's start with the Subject line:

As per my data as well as studies performed by other marketing companies, 50-60% of people open an email based on the subject line.

Subject lines are meant to tell recipients exactly what they're going to get in the email body.

The email subject line is the key to unlocking the door.

Some of my personal favorite email subject lines are:

- Domain Name For Sale
- Domain Name (without using "for sale")
- (Name) You Deserve Better Name (Domain Name)
- (Name) Question About (recipient business name)
- Hey (First name or full name)
- (Name) This Can Be Yours (Domain Name)
- (Name) Time To Upgrade (Domain Name)
- (Name) This is Available (Domain Name)

Make sure your subject lines are in title case, not lowercase.

Title case example: Domain Name For SALE

Lowercase example: domain name for sale

Personalize, Personalize, Personalize

Personalization increases your open rate by 25-30%

- Subject line - Hey there (Wrong)
- Subject line - Hey (Name) (Correct) + 30%

So, always make sure your message is catered to the recipient – whether that's their name or company.

It helps build a rapport and increases the likelihood of your email getting opened in the first place.

The opening line of your email

If you know the name of your recipient, use this:

“Hi (Name), I own this (Domain Name), and I’m seeking out some potential buyers for this name.”

Or

“Hi (Name), My company owns this (Domain Name), and we are seeking out some potential buyers for this name.”

Some more opening lines:

“Hi(Name), I own this domain name (domain name), and I’m looking to sell this.”

Don't worry about your introductions (prospects don't care).

If you can't find the name of your prospect, you can try:

"Hi/Hello, I own this (Domain Name), and I'm seeking out some potential buyers for this name."

Importance of email body personalization.

Personalized emails stand out within the inbox as highly relevant, tailor-made material. Personalized emails make an email more likely to be opened and clicked on.

The reality is, people won't read anything if they don't feel connected to it. The modern customer thinks, "What's in it for me? It all begins with knowing a little about your customer besides their name.

Example of a personalized email body with Name/Company:

"Hi (Name), We own this domain name (Domain name), and we are seeking out some potential buyers for this name.

After doing some search, we found out that your business (name of the company) might be a potential suitor for this domain.

I would love to know if it suits you and let me know if you would like to receive more information?

Warm Regards,

Yogi Solanki

Company Name, Phone Number, Website”

A/B testing

A/B testing means split testing. In A/B testing, you can test out two or three variations of subject lines/emails to check which one is getting the best response.

How to do A/B testing: choose your winner!

Choose any of the two subject lines I mentioned, divide them into two equal parts, and test them out by sending emails.

Subject Line A - Domain Name For Sale

Subject Line B - Domain Name

Whichever subject line gets the highest open rate is your winner.

Split testing is critical, and it allows you to increase the open rate significantly.

Similarly, you can do A/B testing for your email body contents, CTA.

CTA

When it comes to sales emails, the goal is usually to set up a meeting with a prospect to talk about their business.

The CTA (call to action) is the key to boosting the reply rates. That's the sentence, or a question, the addressee reads at the end of our message. That's the part that persuades them to undertake some action – send us a reply

CTA example:

- Would you like to receive more info?
- Do you have any questions?
- Do you have any offer ($)

Always end your email by asking a question

Best day/time to send email

In general, every new day brings a unique opportunity, but in email marketing, sending emails at the correct time on an optimum day can make all the difference.

Many believe that Mondays are better days to send cold emails since prospects are back in the office, and sending emails on Friday is not good because most of the prospects are in a party mood and looking to the weekend.

Based on my success and other marketing companies' studies, these are the best days to do email outreach.

- Tuesday
- Wednesday
- Thursday

Tuesday and Thursday work particularly well, but Tuesday stands out to be the best day with not much margin.

Tuesday and Thursday open rate - 19-20%

Wednesday is not bad either, but it lacks behind both Tuesday and Thursday.

If you are a full-time domain investor like me, I would highly recommend to work at least 5-6 days a week and push yourself more on your favorite days to get the most out of it.

The Best Time To Send Email

We all want to know the best time to send emails because we all want reasonable open rates.

And good open rates lead to replies; replies lead to offers, and offers lead to that magic word which we all are after Domain SOLD!!

Marketing companies have done many studies about the best time to do email outreach; based on those studies and my own data, I'm sharing the best time to do outbound.

The best time to send emails are:

- 6 AM
- 10 AM
- 2 PM
- 8 PM

Primarily 6-7 AM and 8: PM, reply rates during these times are higher.

Time Zone: Depends on your recipients.

Email Follow-up

As most email marketers say, the real money is in the follow-up.

We all think of closing the deal over the first email we send, but that happens very rarely, and when we don't get any reply, we get disheartened and don't follow up.

You are not alone; this happens to everyone, and most people tend to give up after the first email.

Below is the data which I'm sharing after doing some research on my sales history.

2% of sales - made in the first contact

10% of sales - made in the fourth contact

80% of sales - made in the fifth to twelfth contact

And, this data is pretty accurate across all sales, not just domains.

Let's discuss the third option, 80% of sales, in detail.

"80% of sales - made in the fifth to twelfth contact."

I'm not trying to say that you have to send 5-12 emails to every prospect. What I'm saying is if you have received interest or a reply from one of your first emails, then the total interactions it took me to close that deal is 5-12.

That includes:

- Negotiations
- Providing domain ownership proof
- Explaining the domain ownership transfer process, etc.

Now you must be thinking, “what if I don’t receive any reply from any of my emails?”

That’s okay; it happens to everyone; let me share with you how to follow up and get replies.

Important: “Make sure before you send emails, you are using an email tracker to check if your emails are getting open or not; this will help you to track the performance of your email campaign.”

With the help of an email tracker, you can see how many people have read your emails but haven’t responded.

Here are some email trackers you can use:

- Snov.io
- MixMax
- Mailtrack
- Saleshandy

So... You've built up your email list and done your job by sending emails, but you haven't received any reply

No worries. Let's get them to reply to you.

- Track down how many people have opened your email (using email tracker)
- Check how many prospects have opened more than once or just once.
- Put them on your priority list and follow them back using the same email thread.
- Change the timing for doing follow up. If your initial email was in the morning with no response, follow them back in the evening.
- You can also track at what time they opened your initial email (through email tracker), and you can follow up at that same time.
- If you've done 2-3 follow-ups without getting any response, change the subject line in the same email thread to "Did I lose you?" (by John Barrow's) and hit send. This will often get prospects who've gone dark to respond to you.

You can repeat the same process with other recipients who have not opened your email at all.

Once you have figured this out, the next question you might be thinking is...

How many times should you follow-up with a prospect?

Some say that they would follow-up for as long as there is a reply from the prospect.

I, for one, am completely against it. I believe that if a prospect has opened your email and still hasn't responded after several emails, I do always think that they are not interested in your proposal.

And, If you still send them emails continuously, they might mark you as spam.

I recommend following up at least 3-4 times after your first email with a gap period of 3-4 days.

Let's talk about what a follow-up should be like

Day 3: The first follow up email:

For prospects who haven't replied to your first email, send this email in the same thread. Provide context by saying that you had reached out to them earlier.

This email should convey the same message in a different format.

"Hi {first name},

I know my previous email might've been something you didn't understand about how a domain name can add value to your business, and I'd like to apologize if I caught you at the wrong time.

I decided to reach out to your company (company name) only because I was confident that I could add value to your business. I'm sure you must be having some questions regarding {domain name}? If so, may I propose a short email exchange or phone call?

Looking forward to hearing from you.”

Short and Sweet:

“Hi {first name},

Following up to see if you have gone through my previous email and have any questions related to (Domain Name)

Looking forward to hearing from you.”

Day 7: Follow up email 2:

“Hi {first name},

I have not heard from you? I hope you had a chance to go through my previous email, and it did not get buried in your inbox.

Maybe I didn’t explain my email well enough, and you need more information.

Would you like me to send you more info about (domain name), or should I stop sending you an email?

Looking forward to hearing from you.”

Day 11: Follow up email 3 (All-in)

This is the last follow up email because I only do three follow up and if you haven't received any reply from the prospects, in this email, try to provide as much information you can,

“Hello {{first_name}},

You don't seem to be interested in [domain name] that could help you get more value.

But before I let you go, I thought I should share some information myself because you might need this (domain name) in the future.

You are currently using .net (if prospect using .net or any other extension), but do you know dot com is the most popular web extension in the world?

This (domain name) can increase your online presence and make your site more credible and respectable.

If you're unfamiliar with the value of domain names and how they're priced, check out these recent sales and prices:

- Domain1.com for $$$$
- Domain2.com for $$$$
- Domain2.com for $$$$
- Domain2.com for $$$$

Based on these recent similar sales and the high demand of dot com asking price for this (domain name) is $$$$

How it works: if you are interested and ready to purchase this name now or in the future, we can handle the purchase of this name securely through the domain marketplace (Dan.com/ Escrow/Epik), and you can buy this (domain) securely and get the ownership instantly.

I hope all this information makes more sense now; if you ever change your mind, reply to this email or call me on the number below.”

Make sense?

Here are a few more quick tips on email follow-up.

Email Follow-up tips:

- On your last email follow-up, you can choose the same email thread or compose a new email; sometimes, it is better to try something new.
- Be human. No one wants to talk to a robot. Show the prospects that you genuinely care about them.
- Point out a weakness in their domain that can be fixed by you.
- Follow the recipients on LinkedIn and politely ask if they have gone through your email.
- Try new email subject lines.
- Use “I forgot to mention....” (write some value about domain)
- Follow up old/dead leads using “Let’s take another look.” In the subject line.
- If someone has rejected your offer earlier, use this in a subject line, “Would anything change your mind?”
- When following up on old leads, give them a discount. I sold many domains like this.

If someone asks you to unsubscribe, please do that.

Most importantly, don’t give up; keep hustling. Selling someone domains without even knowing them through email is the best feeling you can get.

Chapter 15 - Objection handling

Not interested:

This is the most common reply we get while doing outreach, and whenever a prospect replies “not interested,” most of us just give up because, in our mind, we just think he/she is not going to buy.

I’ve sold many domains where the first reply was “not interested,” but I’ve also lost many sales where I could not convince the buyer.

Let’s discuss how to get past this objection:

- Ask why they are not interested.
- Is it trust?
- They don't understand what a domain is.
- Do they think the price will be high?

This is how I reply if someone is “Not interested.”

*“Hi (name). Thank you for getting back to me; I appreciate it!
I would like to ask you for a couple of extra minutes to understand why you are not interested. Do you think that's possible? Your feedback would be vital for us.*

*Thanks in advance.
Regards,
You.”*

You need to understand if your prospect is saying ‘no’ or ‘not now’ or ‘not yet.’ If they're saying ‘not yet,’ it's fair to ask: When would be a good time for my next follow-up?

They'll be honest with you because they don't want to waste their time or yours.

If your prospect indicates that they really aren't interested, they'll tell you to stop following up. Try a breakup email like this:

“Hi (name),

Should I follow-up in three months? Would it be a preferable time for you?

Thanks in advance!

Regards,

You.”

I’ve sold some domains using this “follow-up in three months” in the past because you never know when they might get a need for the domain, so keep all your options open.

Even if someone isn’t interested, you should leave the door open for a future deal.

Most people stop following up too soon because they’re afraid of becoming an annoyance. But, on average, deals take 3-5 or more follow-ups to close.

Note: if someone really wants you to unsubscribe, remove them from your list and move on to the next prospect.

How much?

After “not interested,” this is one of the most common responses you will receive.

The strategy for this, which I’m going to share, has worked for me because my asking price is low, and most of the domains I sell are in the $100-$1,000 range.

Before you start using this strategy, it is important to know your sweet spot, cash flow, and figure out your profit margin:

Let me share my example:

- Sweet Spot: My sweet spot is $299-$1,000 range.
- Buying Low/Selling Reasonably: Domains that I buy are either from drops, backorder, auctions. I don’t spend much money buying them. Based on that, I never ask a price that is not reasonable.
- Cash Flow: I believe in cash flow, and if you’ve constant cash flow coming, that helps to give you a lot of confidence, especially if you are a full-time domain investor like me.

- Knowing your ROI: If I've paid $12 to acquire a name and I'm able to sell this name for $100, $200, $300, $500+, I got my ROI. In any other business, it is tough to get this much profit; the average gain in any other industry is around 10-20%.
- Cost of living: This also plays a vital role in this, especially if you are in a developing country like India (me), Bangladesh, Pakistan, Nigeria, and other countries; also, the dollar conversion in these countries matters a lot.

For example, the average salary in my country, India, is $300/$400/month. If I can sell ten domains every month with an average price of $300, that will be $3,000/month while working from home.

I don't have to worry about waking up early, getting stuck in traffic on my way to a job where I'll only get $300-$400 every month by working Monday-Friday for 8-9 hours a day.

$3,000 in India is a super impressive income even if you are in big cities.

In my opinion, $3,000/month is not bad money even in developed countries like Australia, UK, USA, Canada, especially if you are doing this as a side hustle.

This is precisely what I've been trying to do every month, and I think it is important to understand all these points mentioned above.

And based on all these points, I've been able to build a successful business model.

I hope all this makes sense. Now, let's move on to "How Much?"

I have divided this into two parts - My offer/your offer.

My Offer - If you received a reply, "How much?" what you can do is, do some digging on the company that replied to you.

For example:

- Check the website to make sure it is fully developed.
- Check on LinkedIn to see how big they are, how many employees they have.

Do all these checks to build a strategy for your asking price, which can help you get a fair price.

You can also use GoDaddy Appraisal to get an idea of how much this domain can be worth and see comparable domains that have been sold in the past.

You can use NameBio.com to see past sales that are relevant to your domain name.

After getting all this data, give them your asking price (reasonable).

Tip: Take the screenshot of the GoDaddy appraisal, but don't add it as an attachment. Upload it into your email body and let them know about the GoDaddy appraisal for that particular domain.

GoDaddy is a brand that everyone knows, so it will help buyers understand the domain's value.

This is precisely how my email looks like if the buyer replies, "how much?":

"Hi (Name),

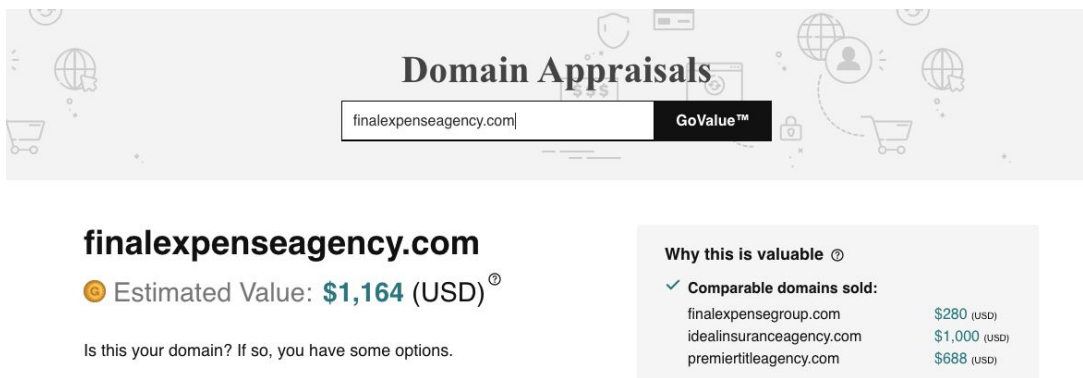

Thank you for your reply and interest in buying this domain

As I mentioned in my previous email, this is a dotcom name, and dotcom is the most popular, commonly used web extension.

(if they are using .net .io or hyphen, four-word names and you have 2-3 words .com name, explain few benefits)

I'm not asking for a retail value. I'm looking to sell this domain at a wholesale price, and the retail value for this domain based on GoDaddy appraisal is over $1000.

Below is the GoDaddy appraisal screenshot to show you the retail value for this name, and you can also see some of the comparable domains sold in the past.

Why this is valuable ✓ Comparable domains sold:
finalexpensgroup.com	$280 (USD)
idealinsuranceagency.com	$1,000 (USD)
premieritleagency.com	$688 (USD)

Based on this, my asking price is only $499. You can buy this securely from the domain marketplace and get the ownership instantly.

Let me know please if you would like me to explain to you how you can buy this securely and get the ownership?

I am looking forward to hearing from you.

*Regards,
Your name"*

Your Offer: I personally never give a price on my first email. I throw the ball in their court and ask them for an offer to buy this domain even if they have asked me for an offer first.

"Hi (Name)

Thank you for your reply and interest in buying this domain.

The GoDaddy appraisal and comparable domain sales data becomes very valuable, especially if you are buying these domains from drops, backorder, auctions, and have only spent $12-$200 on the name.

For domain valuation, you can also use Estibot.com.

If you have a high-value domain, you can use NameBio.com to find some high-end sales similar to your domain and send it to the buyer.

Never undersell your domain. Most of the time, the buyer's first offer will not be their best offer. Always counter any initial offer that is submitted.

If the buyer's counteroffer comes quickly, it means they are interested and may have more money to spend on the domain.

Chapter 16 - Where to Sell Domains Easily (Domain Marketplace)

There are many domain marketplaces where you can sell your domains, such as GoDaddy, Dan, Epik, and many more.

GoDaddy: I know selling on GoDaddy is a bit expensive because they charge 20% whenever you sell a domain through them, but I started with GoDaddy because of the trust factor.

GoDaddy is a big brand, and everybody knows who GoDaddy is. When I started selling domains via outbound, a few things which came across my mind were:

- Why will they buy from me?
- They don't know me
- They might think it is a scam.

So, what can you do if you are a beginner? Start selling domains through GoDaddy to build up the trust between you and the buyer.

Most businesses already have GoDaddy accounts, which helps when you guide them to complete the purchase through GoDaddy.

Get some sales first, which will give you more confidence, and don't worry about the 20% commission. You can cover this later.

How to sell domains on GoDaddy:

Create a GoDaddy auctions account; they do charge some fees to use their auctions platform (make sure you check on it)

Once you have an account ready, list your domains with the price.

You can ask the buyer to go to GoDaddy and search for the name you are selling, or you can copy and paste the buy now link from the GoDaddy listing in your email and send it to your buyer so that they can buy the name.

Once you start getting a few sales on GoDaddy, use that confidence to sell domains on Dan.com.

Why Dan.com? because Dan only charges 9% and 5% if you upload the lead yourself.

How to sell domains on Dan.com

When I started selling domains on Dan.com, I used their landing page to guide the buyers to click on the buy now, and later on, when I saw it is working, I switched to add a lead on dan, which helps me save 4%.

To be honest, I was not even aware of “add or upload a lead into Dan.com,” and they only charge 5%, until one of my domain friends Jonny told me about this. Guess I was too much busy selling domains, and I didn’t even notice it (dumb). Thanks, Jonny.

Before you ask the buyer to purchase through Dan, make sure you explain to the prospect the whole process on how to buy and how to get ownership of the domain.

What you can do:

Once you and the buyer agree on a specific price, send them this email.

“Hi (name). Thank you for accepting the offer. Now the next step is effortless.

I’ll list this domain to one of the leading domain marketplace Dan.com and send you a buy now link so you can buy this securely and get the ownership instantly.

They use escrow service to protect both buyer and seller; the whole process is seamless.

May I send you a buy now link?

Any questions, please let me know?

Wait for the buyer’s response, and if the buyer says, “Yes.”

Upload the lead into Dan, send another email to your buyer (same time).

“Hi (Name), I have sent you a buy now link through the leading domain marketplace Dan.com.

Please check your email (spam too), and Now you can buy this securely and get the ownership instantly.

Any questions, please let me know.

Regards,”

It works like a charm, but always make sure that before you send a buy now link through Dan.com, you have explained to the buyer about the whole process.

What if the buyer has not clicked on the buy now button on GoDaddy/Dan? And a couple of days have passed.

This is frustrating because you have done your hard work, but the buyer has not completed the purchase yet.

In this case, be patient and don't rush, wait for a minimum of 1 day, and send them a reminder on the second day.

"Hi (Name), Following up to see if you have received the buy now link through Dan.com?"

Please let me know if you have any more questions?"

Regards,

Your name "

AND... if you still haven't received any reply, try this:

“Hi (Name), I have not heard from you. I thought we had a deal?

I forgot to mention that this (domain name) is now publicly listed on the marketplace, which means anyone can buy it anytime. I don’t want you to lose this name because we virtually shook hands on this deal.

Let’s get this done, please, and move forward.

Regards,

Your name “

If you still haven't received a reply, you should let them go and move on. This happens all the time in sales, so rather than wasting more time, spend the time on another deal.

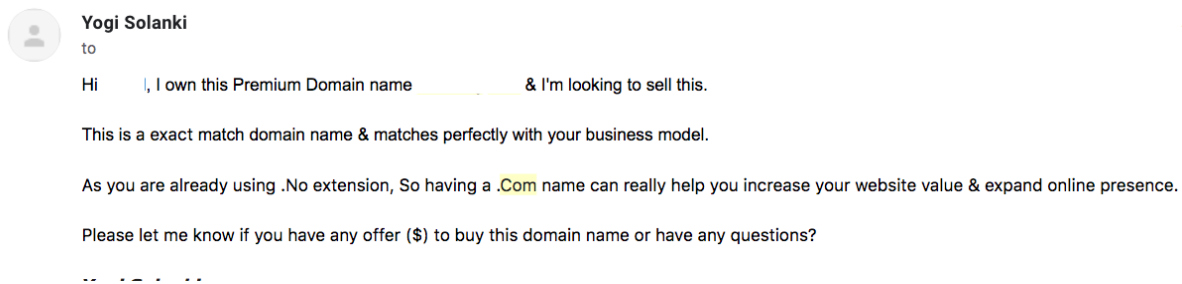

Once the deal is closed, always reach out to the buyer with a thank you note.

Now, in the next chapter, I’m going to share some of my real sales examples.

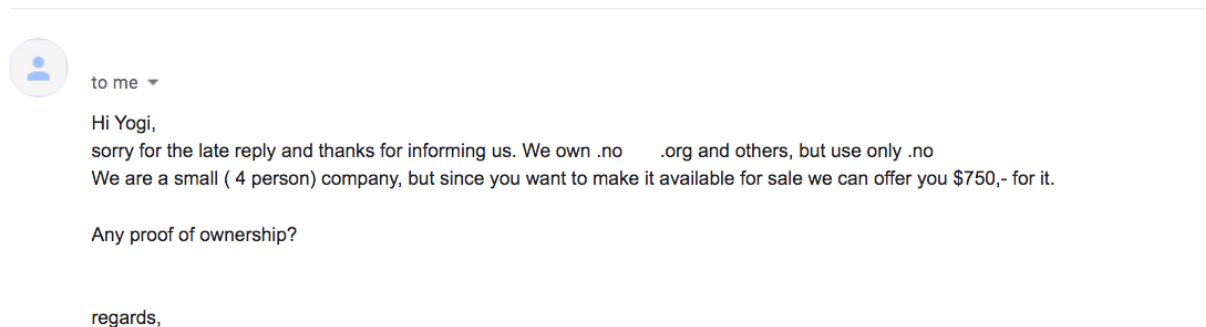

Chapter 17 - Real Sales Examples:

Don't we all want an easy sale where we don't have to go back and forth and just get our domain sold? It does happen, but not very often.

Below is an “easy sale” which I got for $750!

Buyer:

Now, some of you might say I could have asked for more, and I 100% agree with you, but I paid only $59 for this domain and wanted to be reasonable.

After researching that company, I found out they are a small company, and I accepted the offer for $750.

Key points:

- I asked for an offer.
- The buyer had .no .net, and .org.
- I had the .com (Value).
- I provided them the ownership proof by redirecting the domain to their main site.

Bit of work (Going back and forth): $400

Hi , I own this Domain name & I'm looking to sell this.

This is a exact match .com domain name & matches perfectly with your business model

Please let me know if you have any offer ($) or have any questions?

Buyer:

Hey Yogi,

I might be interested. Who do you own it through (godaddy, etc?)? I'm assuming I'd have to go through them to buy?

I'm a small business, so I don't have a lot of excess cash laying around to buy, especially right now. Would you take $200?

Thanks,

Me:

Yogi Solanki

to

Hi , Thanks for your reply. To be very honest with you $200 is a bit less.

The market value for this domain name is over $1000 as per Godaddy appraisals.

Looking at the market conditions, I can sell this to you for only $450.

YES, you can buy this through Godaddy, I can send the GoDaddy link by which you can buy this instantly for only $450.

Would you like to proceed further? shall I send you the GoDaddy link?

Buyer:

to me ▾

Hi Yogi - How about $400? If you're OK w/ that I'll buy it, please send the link.

Thanks,

Boom! I accepted the $400 offer and sold the domain on GoDaddy.

Key points:

- I used a GoDaddy appraisal to guide them on the value.
- I sold this domain on GoDaddy because the buyer wanted it through GoDaddy.
- The buyer was using dot .com, but it was a four-word name.

For example:

The buyer had - QuotesandApplyNow.com.

I had the three-word name - QuotesandApply.com.

I paid only $12 for this domain.

Excellent ROI, isn't it?

These two sales I mentioned above have one thing in common: "Me asking for an offer."

Now, let's discuss "Let's meet in the middle."

Hi, I own this Domain name & I'm looking to sell this

This is an exact match .Com domain name & matches perfectly with your business model.

Please let me know if you have any offer ($) or have any questions?

Buyer:

to me

How much?

My response (With price)

Yogi Solanki

to

Hi , Thanks for your reply asking price is only $499.

As per Godaddy appraisal, The retail value for this domain is over $1200

How it works: If interested I can send you a buy now link through domain marketplace Dan.com so you can buy this instantly

Let me know please if you like me to list this domain for $499 & send over the link to you

Buyer:

to me ▼

Would $399 work for you?

Me: “Let's meet in the middle.”

Yogi Solanki ·

Let's meet in middle please & close this deal for $450 and I will set this up for you. Sound good?

And... SOLD!!

to me ▼

Sounds good to me. How about I send that as an offer through my web host , who has a way to do it.

The buyer wanted to purchase through his web host, but I manage to convince him and close that deal on Dan.com

Now... Let's move on from "Not Interested" To "Interested."

Convincing someone via email is challenging. It doesn't work every time, but I'm happy to share one sale where I was able to convince the buyer.

My first email:

Hi, I own this Domain name & I'm looking to sell this.

This is a exact match .com domain name & matches perfectly with your business model

As you are already using .Es extension , So having a .Com name can really help you increase your website value & expand online presence.

Please let me know if you are interested or have any questions?

Buyer:

Good afternoon. I'm not interested in buying anything from you.

Me:

Yogi Solanki

to

Hi Thank you for getting back to me, I really appreciate it.

I would like to ask you for a couple of extra minutes to understand why you are not interested

Do you think that's possible? Your feedback would be very important for me

Thanks in advance.

Buyer:

to me ▼

Yogi,

I have passed this along to my IT department and they informed me this is a potential scam.

Me:

Yogi Solanki

to

Hi , I totally understand your concern but let me explain to you how this whole process works.

You are not paying me directly and I'm not going to ask you for your visa/mastercard info.

How it works: If we both agree and ready to proceed further, I'll list this domain on one of the leading domain market place Dan.com

On Dan.com you can buy this securely and get the ownership

They use Escrow service to make sure both buyer and seller are protected

I won't get paid until you get the ownership of the domain.

Make sense?

Buyer:

to me ▼

Yogi, If you can provide me the proof that you're the owner I'll perhaps consider $400.

Me:

Hi In order to provide you the ownership proof, I've redirect to your main site

You can check yourself by visiting

I've sent you a buy now link through Dan.com, please check your email (spam too).

Any questions please let me know

Buyer:

to me ▼

Thank you. I am almost home to get my card to purchase it.

This doesn't happen every day, but it is worth trying and asking them why they are not interested.

Bonus: I have put all these email templates in a different file.

Bonus - Additional Tips on Domaining.

- Create or join a group on Twitter, Telegram, or WhatsApp with other domainers and learn from each other.
- Have your sales pipeline filled with prospects.
- A sales pipeline is a visual snapshot of where prospects are in the sales process. Sales pipelines show you how many deals salespeople are expected to close in a given week or month.
(<https://www.superoffice.com/blog/sales-pipeline-management-tips/>)
- Be on your toes: If you received a reply from your email, don't wait. Reply as soon as possible. The longer you wait to respond, the longer you have to wait to get that domain sold, wake up if you are sleeping, and reply.
- Find your sweet spot. Most of my sales are from the $299-$600 range.
- Don't feel embarrassed by selling domains from $100-$500; they all add up.
- Avoid doing hand reg and made up names if you are new.
- Find your mentor, follow someone whom you admire and look up to in the domain industry.

- Start slow, don't invest too much into domains, especially if you are new.
- Give yourself a weekly or monthly sales target.
- If you are new, stick with .com only and avoid registering any other inferior extensions.
- Listen to podcasts, read blogs on domains, watch DomainSherpa videos.
- If you have the money, I highly recommend joining the DNAcademy.com course. This is the best course you can find.
- While doing outbound, you will get some angry buyers, asking you to stop bothering them, and some of them will be rude to you. Don't get scared or give up.
- Avoid engaging with rude buyers. Remove them from your list and move on to other buyers.
- If you want to be successful, you need to work hard. Success doesn't come overnight; it requires focus and perseverance.

Lastly, don't give up. Remember, if I or someone else can do this, you can not only do this but do it better and bigger.
